FOREWORD

The one qualification I have for writing the introduction to this interesting monograph is that for a long period I was, in a measure, responsible for the wonderful treasures contained in the famous Chained Library and Archives of Hereford Cathedral. In this way I was able—more than most people—to realise the extraordinarily valuable work done over the years by my colleagues, Mr. F. C. Morgan and Miss Penelope Morgan, in bringing order and method to a vast collection of material which has made the library world famous. Once more we are in their debt by this additional publication.

It is believed that hitherto little attention has been paid to complete collections of seals in the archives of cathedrals or other public bodies, except for the catalogue in four large volumes of those in the British Museum. It is, therefore, an almost unexplored field of research.

The collection of archives in Hereford Cathedral (numbering about 30,000 and dating from Anglo-Saxon times) is of importance not only for the study of seals, but also for genealogy and local ecclesiastical history. The National Library of Wales has always been interested in our documents and we are grateful to them for their work in calendaring about 4,500 of the early deeds and rolls. Mr. Morgan and Miss Morgan have calendared the remainder and made indexes of personal and place names. Unfortunately, with the passage of time, many seals have disappeared and others have been damaged; but we now have a full catalogue of the seals which remain (each now protected with cotton wool) and a fairly large selection of them is on exhibition. Students wishing to inspect the archives should apply to The Librarian, The Cathedral, Hereford.

The Dean and Chapter are grateful to the Woolhope Club for arranging for the publication and for bearing almost all the cost of printing this summary list of their seals, so that one section of their archives may be better and more widely known.

H. A. MORETON.

A CONCISE LIST OF SEALS BELONGING TO THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF HEREFORD CATHEDRAL

The archives belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Hereford Cathedral number about 30,000 items and many have their original seals attached. These do much to illustrate the ecclesiastical history of the Cathedral and the art of sigillography from the 11th to the 20th century. A full descriptive catalogue of the seals has been prepared and this may be consulted at the Cathedral Library upon request. The following is a summary list only. A note of the classification adopted and of the abbreviations used is at the beginning of the list; the dates given are those of the archives if known, and the sizes of the seals are approximate only, owing to chipping, etc.

There is a sequence of royal seals from the time of William I, but Mr. P. Chaplais<sup>1</sup> now suggests that this seal and deed of the Conqueror may be a Westminster forgery of c. 1150–60. Good examples of the royal seals are those of the second of Edward III, the seal of the Exchequer of either Henry V or Henry VI, the second seal of Elizabeth I (designed by Nicholas Hilliard), and the second seal of Charles I. Although the last-named is slightly chipped, the impression from a particularly good matrix is perfect. A Commonwealth seal, showing the House of Commons in session on the obverse and a map of England and Ireland on the reverse, designed by the great medallist Thomas Simon, unfortunately is broken in half. Deterioration in design is well illustrated by the seal of Victoria in yellow shellac.

The first and rare seal of the City of Hereford (dated c. 1227) is important as it depicts the three leopards of England. These commemorate the fact that until 1189 A.D. the city was a royal possession. When the citizens bought the right of self-government and many privileges from Richard I they seem to have been allowed to use the royal beasts.

There is a long sequence of seals of the bishops of Hereford beginning with Gilbert Foliot, some unfortunately fragmentary, until the present day, with only a few breaks. There are some few seals of the Dean and Chapter of varying designs. The earliest, dating from the 12th century, depicts the cathedral church and is poor in quality. Examples of this appear in various forms; some have a counterseal in red wax impressed into the green. Other designs depict St. Ethelbert, the Virgin and Child, etc. The earliest seal of a dean is that of Antellinus (or Ancelinus or Anselm), 1256 A.D., and there are many of canons, other dignitaries and of the two hospitals under the Dean and Chapter.

Ecclesiastical and monastic seals are numerous. They date from the 12th century and include examples from twelve religious houses in the county of Hereford, and Wenlock, Shropshire, also in the diocese. The earliest of these is Dinmore's, dating from 1188. Others specially worthy of notice are one of Gloucester Abbey where the privy seal of the abbot in 1410 A.D. has as the counterseal, the early Abbey seal of 1110 A.D. There is a twelfth century seal of Malvern priory and an especially well-designed fine seal of Reading abbey (the mother church of Leominster). This is beautifully engraved on both sides, with the Virgin and Child between St. James the Greater and St. John the Evangelist on the obverse. On the reverse is Henry I, the founder of the abbey, between St. Peter and St. Paul. Inside the two edges is a Latin verse recording the foundation of the abbey and the date 1328 when the seal was adopted.

The private seals include many of well-known Herefordshire families—some are armorial, some equestrian and some merely conventional in design. That of Hugh Carew is of special interest as the wax has been strengthened with a wisp of fine straw. Only a few have their original protective coverings (e.g., Bp. Gilbert Foliot (A.1360), John Prophet, dean (A.4000), Gislebert de Turbeville (A.2295) and Prémontré Abbey (A.744).

The various methods of attaching seals to documents such as by silk cords, leather thongs or parchment strips, are all represented in the collection. The seal of Henry of Lancaster attached to a grant, in Norman-French, to Abbey Dore is small but of excellent design and in good condition.<sup>1</sup> It is remarkable how many seals, both private and ecclesiastical, date from the 13th century. We know that Hereford was a seat of great learning in the 12th century and had relations with many places abroad. Does the prosperity which this brought to the city account for the many seals of worthy people whose names are unknown except in Hereford deeds? This period was apparently a great time for local craftsmen, when the lesser gentry and tradesmen had their own insignia. Naturally, when literacy increased and signatures became more common, seals became of less importance, and as the years went by the proportion to population became fewer, and were used chiefly on official documents. This is amply shown by the following list of those in Hereford.
