Presidential Address 2012: Aspects of the Wye Navigation by John Eisel .....	25
The Wye has never been the easiest rivers to use for trading purposes, as for much of the year it was too low or flooded, impeded by weirs or covered in ice. Even so, beyond Hay there was boat-building; further downstream much commercial trade and later pleasure craft have left their records explored in this paper.
The Precambrian inlier at Martley, Worcestershire: Martley Rock rediscovered by William Barclay, Paul Olver, Sue Hay, Moira Jenkins, John Payne, John Nicklin and Natalie Watkins .....	56
The extraordinary nature of the rock structures at Martley has been a focus of geological interest from the site's discovery in the 1830s by Murchison. Work has continued until the present day, with much involvement by Woolhope Club members. This paper summarises the history of the site and describes the latest excavations and findings.
Pembridge parish church: some 17th-century visitors and its medieval heraldry by Peter Klein .....	68
Many Herefordshire churches suffered interior losses both in the Civil War and during 19th-century 'restoration'. Pembridge is fortunate in that from the 17th century it was visited by antiquaries who recorded what they saw. This has enabled some heraldic problems to be solved and building dates to be deduced.
The building of Eastnor Castle, 1812-24 .....	83
There must be few Club members who have not visited Eastnor Castle and marvelled at its monumental scale. It superseded the family home at nearby Castleditch, medieval in origin. The author has been granted access to the Eastnor archives and documents in detail both the later history of Castleditch and the massive Eastnor building project which, unsurprisingly, was both costly and difficult.
Richard's Castle: conservation of standing remains 2011-12 by Timothy Morgan .....	121
English Heritage surveyed Richard's Castle in 2000. This survey, together with the report from excavations by Curnow and Thompson between 1962 and 1964, were used to inform fabric assessment and ecological surveys and to formulate a repair strategy. This paper gives an interpretation of the structures found.

Presidential Address 2012: Aspects of the Wye Navigation by John Eisel

- Plate 1.1 A watercolour of washerwomen above Wye Bridge, Hereford, painted by Edward Dayes in 1793, showing details of the rigging of the barge in the foreground
- 1.2 An idyllic view of Hereford, with the Castle Wharf in the centre, showing the stepped mast on the moored boat. A coloured aquatint published by Francis Jukes in 1797, from a watercolour by Edward Dayes

The Precambrian inlier at Martley, Worcestershire: Martley Rock rediscovered by William Barclay, Paul Olver, Sue Hay, Moira Jenkins, John Payne, John Nicklin and Natalie Watkins

- Plate 2.1 Location of Martley Rock and generalised bedrock geology of the area based on BGS data
- 2.2 Detailed geology of Martley Rock
- 2.3 Martley Rock: plan showing the trenches and their geology
- 2.4 Martley Rock: detailed sections of the south wall of the west section of the main trench
- 2.5 Wall of the disused Martley Pit in the main trench. Meta-igneous rocks of the Malverns Complex
- 2.6 Shattered quartz arenite (Martley Quartzite) thrust over green mudrocks (Halesowen Formation)
- 2.7 Tectonised quartz arenite (Martley Quartzite) in Martley Rock Fault Zone
- 2.8 Red Carboniferous sandstone draped over the edge of the Malverns Complex
- 2.9 Composite view of the main trench showing multicoloured sandstones, siltstones and claystones of the Halesowen Formation resting unconformably on red clay of the Raglan Mudstone Formation
- 2.10 Red Carboniferous silty sandstone passing upwards into olive-grey fine silt
- 2.11 Clast from the 'cream silt' near the west end of the main trench, showing lamination picked out by white feldspar crystals
- 2.12 Pink and green sheared meta-igneous rocks of the Malverns Complex thrust and folded over Martley Quartzite.
- 2.13 Late Carboniferous orange and black mudrocks of the Halesowen Formation exposed in the central section of the western trench
- 2.14 Members of the Woolhope Club (Geology Section) working on section measurements in the side trench

Pembridge parish church: some 17th-century visitors and its medieval heraldry by Peter Klein

- Plate 3.1 The central corbel of three, placed at the apex of the Pembridge chancel arch, formerly supporting the Rood cross, and perhaps depicting the face of Christ
- 3.2 The sole surviving medieval armorial bearing at Pembridge, painted over the wall-painting in the south transept
